

FIVE ways schools are using Parent Hub to improve parent communication during COVID.

1 They're sending COVID updates that reach every parent instantly

Parent Hub is a smart cookie - it knows how to send messages in an emergency.

APPSMSEMAIL

You have full control over how messages are sent, including App, SMS and Email. Plus, left to just do it's thing, it's clever enough to know when parents are engaging via the app, so will automatically help you cut back on SMS spending.

2 They're finding and fixing dodgy MIS data so that messages always get through

The Parent Hub Housekeeping Dashboard gives you all the insight you need into the state of your MIS data, including what needs fixing and how.

That means no more missing contact details, or failed sending to inactive mobile numbers.

🚀 | Good news! Your data is in tip-top shape and you're ready to launch!

3 They're boosting home learning by sharing classroom resources with parents

With Parent Hub you can transport the classroom into the living room.

Your teachers can post quick, simple updates to parents about learning. Like sharing pictures, worksheets, weblinks and other resources, so parents have everything they need to support learning at home.

4 They're simplifying how parents report absences

Managing student absence is a top priority.

With Parent Hub, parents can report their child's absence quickly and easily. It goes straight to an email inbox that you choose, making it super easy to manage whilst keeping your phone lines clear.
